Lost in the Maze

Those who react well get through the labyrinth better

MAZE - Interactive Indoor Ride

Maurer Rides opens the door to a new roller coaster experience, because Maze challenges the riders' reaction skills. Not only do they accelerate and brake themselves. Lasers in four different colours trigger different moods in the indoor coaster and immediately demand certain actions. Only those who master the challenges well will master the labyrinth.

The Maze indoor concept has four zones. The white Mystery Zone takes you to other spheres, mysterious, exciting - or scary?

In the other three zones, however, you need to react quickly: You see a blue laser - then step on it immediately! Only if you reach the blue laser before it switches off will you be rewarded with a boost and be able to accelerate additionally. The blue energy zone demands full concentration and charges your power.

But watch out for red: In the explosive Action Zone, red lasers can slow you down at any time. If you don't slow down fast enough, the red flash will hit you and slow you down.

The yellow haze zone is foggy and toxic. But the yellow lasers are your chance: Wherever they appear, you can press the boost button and become faster.

White, blue, red, yellow - the technical background for this interactive indoor experience is the patented spike drive. The modern version of the gear drive allows the exact position of the vehicles to be recorded at any time - the different coloured lasers in the Maze are switched on and off accordingly. The number of lasers and the interactive elements can be expanded and changed at will by the operator. Start and finish is in the red action zone.

Spike also means 100 % traction at every point on the track. The drive sits directly on the vehicle and instantly takes over every action of the driver. Its reaction speed directly influences the driving experience - in combination with the light, fog and laser elements, an intense pull reminiscent of gaming and virtual reality. But the experience in the Maze is real.
